

Victor Talking Machine.

FORMERLY KNOWN AS

The Berliner Gramophone.

The greatest of all modern inventions and discoveries. Sings solos, duets, quartets, songs, ballads, sentimental and comic; also choice sacred music. Plays cornet, violin, flute, banjo and every known musical instrument, including orchestra and brass band. Lectures, pious, prays. You can have more fun and solid enjoyment with one of these little entertainers in the house than anything else under the sun.

A Gramophone, with ordinary care, will last a life time. The discs or records are made of hard material and are virtually indestructible. Write for catalogues. Sub-agents wanted in every town, village and hamlet in Virginia.

Feeding Bran to Dairy Cows.

While good pasturage is one of the best, if not the best, foods that can be supplied to the dairy cows during the growing season, yet if the best possible results are secured in the production of milk it will in nearly all cases be found advisable to feed the dairy cows some wheat bran daily. The quantity need not be large, but it should be supplied regularly. If a little cornmeal is added, the results would be still better. But bran and good pasturage will enable a cow to maintain a full flow of milk throughout the summer, and the milk will be richer and better for making of good butter than if pasturage alone is depended upon. It is not necessary to put the cows in the stables to feed bran. Convenient boxes or troughs can be arranged in the lot or pasture where the cows are milked and the feeding be done with very little trouble.—St. Louis Republic.

To Handle a Balking Horse.

A correspondent of the Prairie Farmer thus tells how to manage a balky horse:

As I was very much interested in the way in which the driver brought his balky horse to a start, so pleasantly told in a recent issue of the Prairie Farmer, I send the following, which I know to be very effective in bringing a balky horse to his senses: Make a large loop in one end of a rope, and into it, about half way from foot to knee, put one of the horse's fore legs, then pass the other end of the rope to the driver, who will gently draw it till the horse raises his foot from the ground and shows an inclination to go. As soon as the horse starts loosen the rope around his leg and let him go at any pace he chooses. This experiment I saw tried with great success on one of the balkiest horses I ever saw.

They Do the Cause Harm.

Every now and then we read of students at an agricultural college who want the name of the institution changed, says Rural New Yorker. That word "agricultural" hurts their feelings. They would probably feel insulted if one were to call them farmers, though probably the greater insult would be given the profession of farming. But what is the matter with such young people anyway? Who is to blame for the fact that they are ashamed of the noblest and oldest business on the face of the earth? Can it be that those who teach them have lost the true spirit of agricultural education, or is it the fault of fond but misguided parents? Whoever is at fault, the fact remains that such students do the cause of the American farmer more harm than good!
